Rights of the Admiralty to be Defined-White Star Liners' Transfer to For- cally joined. We agreed that a tearful eign Flag Not Possible Under Present

London, April 24.-In the House of Fiske and Mr. Haines in that final scene admiralty, Hugh O. Arnold-Forster, replying to a question, said that the admiralty was considering the whole matthe event of contingencies arising such was settled upon no trade combinations gree. under foreign control were contemplated, but the admiralty had appointed a

The admiralty in the meanwhile had Star line which preclude the possibility of any of their armed cruisers or merchant steamers being transferred to a foreign flag without the consent of the admiralty during the unexpired portion of the admiralty agreements. Important legal points were involved, including the questions whether, in the event of war, there was anything to prevent these companies from substituting a foreign for the British flag at short no tice, and whether the admiralty has the means of enforcing its right of preemption or hire in such case; or if, by abandoning the subvention, the compa-nies could claim that the right of preemption ceased. All such points would be carefully considered, and the admiralty's rights would be ascertained.

Replying to a question in the House Commons later as to whether the board of trade had received information that several steamship lines had been sold to an American company, with its principal place of business in the United States, and whether the vessels so sold would retain the British flag, the president of the board of trade, Gerald Belfour, said he had no information showing that the sale had been accomplished. If the vessels had been sold they would pass to another flag.

A. J. Balfour, the government leader, with answering a question in the house regarding the growthf of trusts in England and whether the government would appoint a committee to inquire into the ubject, said the government did not think that the subject, at present, was ripe for the kind of inquiry suggested.

It was said this afternoon that the present uncertain position of the Cunard and other steamship companies in standing out from the Atlantic steamship combination was to some extent due to the action of the admiralty, as outlined by Mr. Arnold-Forster in the House of Commons to-day.

THE NEW MISSION HOUSE. The new City Mission building on

Orange street, near Court, is now receiving the roof and will be under cover in a few days. The furring is also well advanced and the lathing will be begun This latter barn was burned to some as soon as the plumbing pipes are in place. The plumbing work will be begun on Monday next. The rooms and various divisons of the building are now clearly outlined. The five. auditorium is pronounced a very fine room by those who have seen it. If losely seated it will accommodate some 750 chairs, gallery included. The galery is to be convertible by means of sliding saish partitions into three sep erate rooms which may be used, independently of the auditorium, as a parof the second floor of the building.

The children's hall, over the auditorium, is also a very fine room, some sixty feet square. This room, like the auditorium below, is built without pillar or post so as to render it convertible into a gymnasium for girls and young women as means may be secured for the purchase of apparatus. It has bath and locker rooms provided over which runs a gallery for spectators.

The project of providing means for such pleasure and benefit for girls, as an expansion of the girls' work already in hand has met with great favor. is a fact that very little indeed has been undertaken in the way of providing means for the physical, social and ress. al advantage of New Haven girls on any considerable scale. Meanwhile the number of girls and young women employed in the various occupations has been steadily increasing. It is to be hoped that some friend of the girls and having means, may volunteer to equip this room with the apparatus needed so that physical culture classes may be early undertaken. The contractors hope to finish the building in July and but a few weeks the association are looking up the funds. But $13,000 now remain to be secured to complete the building and avoid all debt. Nearly 300 of our citizens have been contributors to the fund for the lot and the crection of this building. The response has almost unibeen generous and willing. Many thousands who are now men and women grown have been at some time attendants upon the Mission and have reason to remember gratefully sominfluence in their lives which has come out of English Hall. All such are in vited to contribute at least ten cents. which is just the cost of a brick and what goes with it in the new building. Many will wish to take five or ten. Such contributions will be received each Sat-urday afternoon and evening at English Hall. Larger contributions should be sent to Pierce N. Welch, th treasurer, at the First National bank.
